About Woodruff Place

This gracious historic community, located just one mile east of downtown Indianapolis, is recognized as Indianapolis's first planned residential suburb. In a beautiful park-like setting, you will find fine examples of lovely Victorian era homes, esplanades with fountains and statuary, and an ambiance that is unlike any other. Woodruff Place was included in the National Register of Historic Places in 1972.

About the Home and Garden Tour

Woodruff Place's home and garden tour is one of the largest fundraising activities for the neighborhood that help support the historic infrastructure that makes the neighborhood so unique. This includes the fountains, Town Hall, historic light posts, urns, and statues.

The tour was started in 1977.

Estimated attendance: 800-1,000
